
CREATING unified communities

Together, we can prevent violent extremism and build a more peaceful world.

Young people are a force for peace in this world, using their voices and resources to listen to their communities and bringing about a positive change.

As part of the "Leading the way to Peace - Youth Together for Social Cohesion" project, young people in urban South and Southeast Asia have received training on violent extremism and how to prevent it, followed by innovative youth-led activities to foster tolerance and peace.

YOU can create positive change and help prevent violent extremism by keeping in mind the three "U's":

-
- | | | |
|---|--|---|
| 1 | 2 | 3 |
| UNDERSTAND | USE | UNDERTAKE |
| local narratives | a youth participatory approach | sustainability efforts |
| Find out which narratives and political semantics are used in the specific context, which norms govern peoples' actions and which local violent extremist actors exist. | Include communities in your decision-making and have feedback loops that include the community to inform your programming. | Efforts to prevent violent extremism must be continuous. Start by thinking of entrepreneurial solutions to sustain your efforts and a longer-term plan. |
-

The project is implemented by the Kofi Annan Foundation's Extremely Together initiative, KRIS in the Philippines, CYAAD in Pakistan and GCERF in Bangladesh and financed by the European Union.

Find out more about our work:
www.extremelytogether.org

Together, we can create positive change.

Funded by

